Amazon Customer 4.0 out of 5 stars There are some things it failed to mention and the diagrams are handy but does not cover everything you'd expect. Still essential for doing things yourself though. You can't really find as much on the internet about working on these older Honda's, especially the 1st gen crx so any books on them hold a lot of value. If you're looking for something for one car get the FSM First I was surprised how long the order took. I would have thought the book could have been shipped the same day or next day, but it was a few days before it shipped. Other than the shipping delay, the process was easy, and the results good. Clients in the European market include BMW, Mercedes, Renault, Volvo and Volkswagen. In the US market, CIPA mirrors can be found on Chrysler and Ford vehicles, plus some of the finest motorcycles, boats, ORVs, personal watercraft and snowmobiles manufactured. Since 1985, CIPAU.S.A. has been a privately held U.S. Corporation operating in Port Huron, Michigan. CIPA has continued to show healthy growth year after year. CIPA currently manufactures its products in the U.S, Asia and France, and continues to provide high quality, fastmoving products setting sales volume records in almost every category sold. CIPAs high level of customer service and just in time deliveries have converted CIPA from just a mirror supplier to a business partner. In 1987, CIPA entered the marine industry as a supplier of rearview mirrors to tournament ski boat manufacturers. Today, CIPA supplies mirrors to 100% of the tournament ski boats manufactured in the U.S. Since its entry into the marine industry, CIPA has introduced many innovative mirrors to enhance rearview safety in the family recreational and PWC segments. Sorry, we failed to record your vote. Please try again The plastic pieces are brittle. The lines don't line up with the car. The material is cheap. The mirror is terrible. The reflection seems like its a funny mirror from a carnival. Im very dissatisfied. Definitely not OEM. I rather drive with a missing mirror. Sorry, we failed to record your vote. Please try again I knew it wasnt going to be OEM quality, but I expected something a little better. I suggest getting OEM if you can afford to. I had to drill out extra material around the knob to make it function correctly.

If you absolutely have to have a mirror to pass an inspection and want to save every penny you can, then this one will work. I just dont suggest it to any who hope to retain factory fitment. Redesigned in 1988 and produced to 1991, the CRX was popular for its performance, nimble handling, and good fuel economy. Hondas 1992 CRX del Sol was marketed as a CRX in some markets. In North America, the CRX was marketed in two versions economy and sport. The economy model used a new aluminum 1.3 liter CVCC engine. The sport model featured an aluminum 1.5 liter four cylinder with three valves per cylinder and available with a 5speed manual or 3speed automatic. In spring 1985, Honda introduced an Si Sports, injected model featuring a more powerful 1.5 liter SOHC PGMFI engine. The Si model included a power sunroof, standard dual remote exterior mirrors, rear wiper, 13inch alloy wheels and an Si exclusive ducktail spoiler for the hatch. The Si received body color matched lower cladding, a revised rear spoiler, new bumper covers and 14inch alloy wheels. The interior was upgraded and added a center console with cassette tape storage. 1987 was virtually unchanged from 1986 and would be the final year of the first generation CRX. At its introduction, the CRX was available in Japan through Honda Verno dealership sales channels, and accompanied the Vigor, the Quint, and the Prelude. Though similar versions of the same engine, the Japanese Si engine was stamped ZC, while the European engine was stamped ZC1.

Japanese buyers took advantage of the largest, 1.5 L, engine while still paying the same amount of annual road tax. Phase Two of the project was to have Racing Beat install two 1.8 liter engines with automatic transmissions from the Honda Accord into Synchronicity. Many of these were fitted with fuel injection as standard. Additionally, some of these design changes were added to the concurrent nonVTEC models. Relatively common in Japan, these are sought after models in other markets. The VTEC variable valve timing and lift electronic control engine provided increased power at high RPMs while still allowing low fuel consumption and better idling at low RPMs. The B16A produced 150 PS 110 kW; 148 hp in the European 1.6iVT model where the engine bore the designation B16A1 and 160 PS 118 kW; 158 hp in the JDM SiR model. The CRX was the second car to receive a VTEC engine, shortly after the Integra, although the CRX was more popular and common. A CRX equipped with the ZC engine had a hood with a bump on one side which offered the additional necessary clearance. Cars equipped with a B16A engine came with a hood that was raised across most of the engine bay to offer additional overall clearance for the taller engine. This panel is heavily stippled black. The Si model came with a power sliding sunroof and 14inch alloy wheels. Underneath, the Si model was equipped with a rear antisway bar along with variable ratio rack and pinion steering. The 9091 Si models had 4wheel disc brakes. Four color options were available on the CRX and CRX Si and two color options were available for the CRX HF. Revision due to side impact collision changes. The del Sol was also badged as the CRX del Sol in some markets, and known as simply the CRX in others. Production of the del Sol ended in 1997, and thus, the CRX line was retired. It also made Car and Driver magazines Ten Best list for 1985. The redesigned CRX was on Car and Driver s Ten Best list for 1988.

Commercials for the CRX claimed it could reach 60 miles per gallon fuel economy; according to Horowitzs test, it bested that figure, reaching 65 miles per gallon, and passed the test. These models can be identified by the mounting position of the safety belts. If the belt is mounted in the door, the beams are present. Today, the car is popular for use in drag, autocross and road racing events.
